One day, I was sitting in my room nearly asleep. My snowglobe, which came to my mind, was on my nightstand. I was wondering "What would it be like if I were in a snowglobe?" I closed my eyes for a little while and then I woke up all of a sudden. I saw the North Star out my window. It started to shine and all these sparkles appeared in a circle floating around my room. When they all went away, I saw this blonde headed woman with a blue, sparkley dress. She said "What's your name, sweetie?" I politely answered, "My name is Kayli." She put these shining, blue ices on me. She told me to hold an extra pair of boots. She put me in a winter coat, earmuffs, sweatpants, and a long sleeve shirt. She put me in this place. I didn't know where I was. Until, I saw my bed. She put me in the snowglobe.

Inside of the snowglobe was a village, a snow village in fact. It had many houses with snow on the rooftop. There were other things beside the houses too. There was a small bakery in the corner, an iceskating rink, and a store with food and other goods. The most important of them all was a huge circle with a giant Christmas tree. It was so beautiful with all the ornaments on it. All the lights were on in the village except this one house sitting in the corner. I walked up to the house but all they said was "Go away, please!" I walked away very slowly. I couldn't go to sleep that night because I had no bed, no blankets, and no pillows.
So, I sat under the Christmas tree. I layed there and closed my eyes very slowly.

The next day, I was still in the snowglobe. It was really different in the morning than at night. They had a celebration in the morning. They were dancing and singing Christmas songs. It was all declared by this man named the Snow King. Then that made me think "Is his wife the Snow Queen?"

I was walking up to him but everyone was in a circle around him. Instead, I went back to that dark house in the corner. This time they answered the door. It was an old man and an old woman. They pulled me into their house. They asked what I wanted, so I asked them a few questions. The most important question I asked was "Why don't you ever leave your house?" They answered, "We never do those things because we aren't as energetic and we don't like to do those things."

Later on that day, I took the two elders to the bakery to go eat some cupcakes. They wouldn't get out of their house so I dragged them out of it. After we ate cupcakes, they went back home. I saw him, the Snow King. He was about to declare another celebration. But before he did, I asked "Do you know the Snow Queen?" He paused for a moment and said "Yes!". He asked me if I knew where she was
So I pointed to the North Star. He started to cry which made me start to cry also. "He must miss her." I thought. When I thought of that, it made me miss my parents, sister, cousins, and more of my family.

I said in a whisper "I want to go home.

Then, just like in my room, the North Star started to shine. All of the sparkles appeared in a circle in the snowglobe, next to the Snow King. The Snow Queen appeared right next to him. She said "Sweetie, you have always been able to go home. All you have to do is click your shoes repeatedly, say I want to go home." A few moments later I was in my bed. I didn't really know it but it was a dream the entire time.

The End!
